Meaning of History 01.5 Marks

Main body

A Candidate has to describe the meaning of History Importance of studying History

- i. Understanding our origins. History enables us to understand our societies and their origins. It gives us a sense of belonging to our community. In this way, History influences us to love our country and its people. Also History helps us to know how and why our present societies differ from those of the past.
- ii. Promoting tolerance. History helps us to see the lives of the people in the past with their struggle. It shows us their actions, courage, wisdom and unity. In this way, we understand the culture and behavior of other people. We also learn to respect and tolerate the differences between people and societies. History teaches us to tolerate those differences.
- iii. Learning from past actions. History teaches us that the actions of one person may affect other people. For example, our ancestors discovered crop cultivation and animal husbandry as well as discovering of fire and iron tools. These activities continue to benefit people up to now. This means that, through studying History, we learn that, events that happened in past societies may have influence other communities

- iv. Encouraging search for evidence. History is based on information collected from various sources. When we get a piece of information, we should ask ourselves questions pertaining to, for example, its source, whether the source is trusted and whether the information might have been distorted and then we our own conclusion.

- v. Appreciating other people's culture. History helps us to know that people develop their culture depending on their environments and contacts with other people. Through such contacts, they come to understand the ways of life of other people. Therefore, through studying History, people learn and appreciate the cultures of others in the world.
- vi. Promoting patriotism. History plays a very important role in promoting patriotism. Patriotism means the love of one's country or nation and willingness to defend it. History promotes this because it teaches how the past and present generations offered their lives to build the nation and to defend it from the enemies.
